

The Boston Public Health Commission's REACH US Center of Excellence in the Elimination of Health Disparities (CEED) is pleased to announce that The North Central Massachusetts Minority Coalition has been chosen as one of four New England Legacy Projects.

Through The Legacy Project Partnership Grant The Minority Coalition will receive education, training, technical assistance and the opportunity for parting in a multi-state learning collaborative. This first of its kind grant to the region will support The Minority Coalition in the development of unique strategies to address the social determinants of health and eliminate racial and ethnic health disparities in the Black Community in the region.

Components of such strategies may include: addressing institutional racism, engaging and mobilizing the community, collecting and using data, capacity building of community institutions, conducting community education, advocacy for policy change, mapping community assets, expanding partnerships and developing sustainable strategies to improve community health.

Join us as we implement this important initiative throughout the region.
